AMERICAN TROOPS AID IN VICTORIES ON THREE FRONTS

from the British artillery. The defeated enemy was almost smothered Latest Gains of Allied Troops under the great deluge of steel and explosives.

A large number of guns have been captured by the British and Americans in addition to the great batches of prisoners which continue to arrive at the cages. The American troops alone captured two complete field batteries and a battery of heavy artillery. The Americans captured these guns Tuesday afternoon when they suddenly outflanked both ends of the valley south of Premont, taking all the German guns

German reinforcements have arrived, but as these troops have been engaged several times recently their presence merely adds to the confusion in the enemy ranks.

Throughout Tuesday and last night the British had complete control of the air. Roads, barracks, massed troops and batteries behind the German lines all were targets for the busy British bombing airplanes.

During the day it was noticeable that German airplanes were seldom seen. The few enemy machines that did venture forth to places where they were not wanted were quickly engaged, and in aerial fights a considerable number of the enemy were brought down.

There is great confusion within the enemy lines. On the front of the two British Armies engaged elements from no fewer than twentynine enemy divisions have been identified along the twenty-mile fighting line. It seems almost incredible until it is realized that some of these divisions have been engaged almost continuously since Aug. 8 and many are mere shadows of the old organizations.

The ground over which the great battle has been fought is covered with dead men and horses and many Germans are buried under tons of earth in collapsed dugouts. Only a few of the prisoners captured had heard of the Austro-German plea for an armistice and their ideas on the subject were extremely hazy.
